Right of first refusal

If a share has been transferred from a shareholder to a person who is not a shareholder in the company, the other shareholders have the right to redeem the share. The redemption right must also be used for a smaller number of shares than the offer includes. The new owner of the share must immediately notify the board of the limited company in writing of the transfer. He must also show how he has obtained ownership of the share. When the notification of the transfer of a share has been made, the board must immediately notify each beneficiary whose postal address is known to the limited company. The board invites those entitled to redemption to submit a claim to the limited company in writing, at the latest within two months from the notification to the board of the transfer.

If more than one person entitled to redemption applies, all shares shall, as far as possible, be distributed between the persons entitled to redemption in relation to their previous holdings of shares in the limited company. Remaining shares are distributed by lot by the limited company's board or, if a liquidator requests it, by a notary public.

If a share that is subject to redemption rights has been transferred for consideration, the redemption amount must correspond to the consideration, unless special reasons cause otherwise. The redemption amount must be paid within one month from the time the redemption amount was determined.

An action regarding the right of first refusal must be brought within two months from the day on which the settlement claim was presented to the limited company.

§ 12 Settlement of disputes by arbitrators

Should a dispute arise between the company and the board, board member, managing director, liquidator or shareholder, it must be referred to arbitration by arbitrators in accordance with the Act (1999:116) on arbitration.
